Ben Franklin was a Twitter master a quarter-millennium before the medium, as I wrote in the Foreword to Mark Major's excellent new book Poor Richard, ANOTHER Almanac for Architects and Planners, but Franklin was also more skilled at describing true Original Green sustainability than anyone alive today. What follows are some of my favorite nuggets of Poor Richard wisdom. Read them, then ask yourself "does this help keep things going in a healthy way, long into an uncertain future?" More often than not, the answer is a resounding "yes."

Here's another question to ask yourself as you read these: "is this bit of Franklin wisdom more about consuming things or sustaining things?" Or, "is this more about using stuff up or handing stuff down?" And one more: "how many of these have been sticky enough to come down in some form to our day? Here's Ben, in chronological order:

Hunger never saw bad bread.

The poor have little, beggars none, the rich too much, enough not one.
 He that lies down with Dogs, shall rise up with fleas.
 Without justice, courage is weak.
 All things are easy to Industry; all things difficult to Sloth.
 Fools multiply folly.
 Hope of gain, lessens pain.

Necessity never made a good bargain.
 Humility makes great men twice honorable.
 Three may keep a Secret, if two of them are dead.
 What's given shines, what's received is rusty.
 Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy and wise.
 To be humble to Superiors is Duty, to Equals Courtesy, to Inferiors Nobleness.
 God helps them that help themselves.
 Don't throw stones at your neighbors, if your own windows are glass.
 Creditors have better memories than debtors.
 I saw few die of Hunger, of Eating 100,000.
 He that would live in peace & at ease, must not speak all he knows, nor judge all he sees.
 He that can compose himself, is wiser than he that composes books.
 Well done is better than well said.
 The worst wheel of the cart makes the most noise.
 The noblest question in the world is: What Good may I do in it?
 Write with the learned, pronounce with the vulgar.
 Sell not virtue to purchase wealth, nor Liberty to purchase power.
 The ancients tell us what is best, but we must learn of the moderns what is fittest.
 As we must account for every idle word, so we must for every idle silence.

Promises may get thee friends, but Nonperformance will turn them into enemies.
 When befriended, remember it: when you befriend, forget it.
 Be always ashamed to catch yourself idle.
 If you would keep your Secret from an enemy, tell it not to a friend.

Time is an herb that cures all Diseases.
 Wish a miser long life, and you wish him no good.
 Drive thy business; let not that drive thee.
 Search others for their virtues, thy self for thy vices.
 He that falls in love with himself, will have no Rivals.
 Let thy Discontents be Secrets.
